Edinburgh International Festival The Opening Concert

NYCOS National Girls Choir

Edinburgh, 07.08.2022, 16:01 Time

USPA NEWS - Sir Donald Runnicles and the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra launched the 2022 Festival with the spectacular Carmina Burana.

Scottish conductor Sir Donald Runnicles and massed choral and instrumental players from Scotland and beyond. Celebrating the joyful launch of the International Festival's 2022 Usher Hall concerts – with an exuberant return to live, concert hall performances.

As the Music Director of the Deutsche Oper Berlin and Conductor Emeritus of the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra, Runnicles is a major figure on international stages. He is also a former member of the Edinburgh Festival Chorus, the International Festival's flagship ensemble, which marks a jubilant return to full strength in a live concert for the first time since 2019.

Joined by three exceptional international vocal soloists and the National Girls Youth Choir of Scotland, they explored the hedonistic revelry, kaleidoscopic colours and roof-raising might of Orff's Carmina Burana. From its spectacular opening 'O Fortuna', known to millions from countless TV shows and adverts, it's was a stirring celebration of the wonders of nature and the pleasures of earthly life.

In his dazzling Pines of Rome, Respighi provided a vivid musical portrait of the Eternal City; from the magical nocturnal song of a nightingale, to the sinister depths of its catacombs and the overwhelming might of Roman legions on the march.
